

Patrick Love has over 14 years of experience as an engineer and engineering supervisor in the electric utility, oil & gas, and cement & minerals industries. Patrick moved to the area in 2019 to pursue his current role with PPL and was invited to participate in Leadership Central Penn, a community leadership and professional development program for Columbia and Montour Counties. Through this program, Patrick's interest in serving the community and local non-profits was sparked, and when the opportunity arose to serve with the Bloomsburg Children's Museum Board of Directors, he jumped at the chance. Knowing the opportunities that STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, & Math) and arts & music have created for him, Patrick hopes to parlay that experience into a positive influence on the museum and the children & families that attend it.

Patrick and his wife, Jen, an ICU/PICU nurse, live in Bloomsburg with their dog, Pluto, and cat, Beaker. In their free time, Patrick and Jen enjoy exploring their new home of Central PA and engaging in the physical activity and mountain sports that this area, and surrounding states, has to offer.
