

Janine Penman is a Columbia County native, graduate of Penn State University (BA, Psychology) and holds two Masters degrees from Temple University (MA, Educational Psychology) and The New School for Social Research (MA, Psychology). Upon graduating from Penn State, Janine entered the pharmaceutical industry in drug development and worked on a number of successfully launched medicines. After leaving Pfizer in 2007, she founded a company to provide services and support to small businesses developing new medicines that fill significant unmet medical needs. Janine is dedicated to reducing the time and cost required to bring medicines to market through the responsible adoption of technology in drug development.

Janine is passionate about her community, and has served as Chairman for Friends of the Bloomsburg Town Pool since 2021. She sees the Children's Museum as one of the great treasures in this community and has enjoyed many wonderful moments with her family, niece and nephew at the museum. Janine is excited to help the museum grow as a place of intellectual curiosity and cultural development for people of all ages.
